A note from Upgraded Remodeling

This original planning guide is designed to help you have a clearer remodeling conversation. It is general planning information, not a construction contract, code interpretation, or financial advice. Requirements and conditions vary by home and jurisdiction; confirm the details of your project with the appropriate professionals before finalizing your scope.

0.1 How to use this scorecard

Give yourself one point for every statement that is true today. Your score is not a pass-or-fail grade; it simply shows where a professional consultation can bring useful clarity.

0.2 Project vision

I can describe the top three problems I want the remodel to solve.

I know whether my priority is function, style, space, accessibility, resale, or a combination of these.

I have gathered a few inspiration images and can explain what I like about them.

0.3 Decision readiness

The household decision-makers agree on the broad project goals.

I understand which choices are essential and which are optional upgrades.

I can discuss an investment range, even if it is preliminary.

0.4 Home and schedule readiness

I know which spaces will be affected and how my household can function during construction.

I have considered timing around travel, school, work, holidays, and other major commitments.

I can provide access to the home and make timely decisions when needed.

0.5 Score your starting point

8–10 points: You are well-positioned for a detailed design and construction conversation.

5–7 points: You have a solid start. A consultation can help organize priorities, scope, and the next decisions.

0–4 points: Begin with discovery. A design-build team can help you clarify what is possible and create a practical path forward.
