The Remodeling Readiness Scorecard

Readiness is not having every finish selected. It is knowing the problem, aligning the decision-makers, and being prepared for the process.

Nine simple checks reveal where you are ready and where a consultation can help.

How to use this guide

Print it, mark it up, and bring it to your first design conversation. The goal is not to know every answer today. It is to reveal the decisions that deserve attention before scope, selections, and construction are underway.

Score your project vision

Give yourself one point for each statement that is true today.

- I can name the top three problems the remodel should solve.
- I know whether function, style, space, accessibility, resale, or a combination leads the project.
- I have inspiration images and can explain what I like about them.

Score decision readiness

A project moves more smoothly when decision-makers share the broad goals and know how tradeoffs will be handled.

- Household decision-makers agree on the broad goals.
- I know which choices are essential and which are optional.
- I can discuss a preliminary investment range.

Score home and schedule readiness

Construction affects routines as well as rooms. Plan for access, timing, pets, work, school, travel, and decision availability.

- I know which spaces will be affected and how we can function during construction.
- I have considered timing around work, school, travel, and holidays.
- I can provide access and make timely decisions when needed.

Interpret your result

Add your points. This is not a pass-or-fail grade; it shows where a professional consultation can create clarity.

- 7-9: Ready for a detailed design and scope conversation.
- 4-6: Solid start; use a consultation to align priorities, investment, and next decisions.
- 0-3: Begin with discovery and feasibility before committing to a solution.
